

Assignment 2.3: Forms and Motives of Imperialism

Assignment Total
/24

In this section of Unit 2, you will be investigating the forms of imperialism as well as the factors which motivated imperialism and how they have affected the world historically. Whenever a nation starts to use economic and political control, for example exploitation of resources and labor, to dominate other nations, this is considered imperialism. This type of exploitation of resources and labor can have many forms and motives.

As you read Section 2.3: Origins of Imperialism, use the following chart to gather important information on the forms and motivating factors of imperialism in discussed. You will be prompted to fill out the required information on Assignment 2.3: Forms and Motives of Imperialism.

Historical imperialism as practiced by imperial powers brought about great changes to indigenous people and cultures around the world. Language change, migration, displacement, and depopulation were all part of these changes. These forms and motives are a crucial understanding for this course.

For each form or motive of imperialism, give a definition (1 mark), an example (1 mark), and an explanation of why your example relates to this form or motive of imperialism (2 marks).

When you have completed Assignment 2.3, submit it on the submission page at the end of this section.

Forms and Motives of Imperialism

Political Imperialism	Define the concept:
	Give an example:
How this example relates:
Economic Imperialism	Define the concept:
	Give an example:
How this example relates:
Cultural Imperialism	Define the concept:
	Give an example:
How this example relates:
Political Motives	Define the concept:
	Give an example:
How this example relates:

Economic Motives	Define the concept:
	Give an example:
How this example relates:
Social Responsibility Motives	Define the concept:
	Give an example:
How this example relates:	