Chapter 12 Summary

Geography of Japan shapes Japanese worldview Resources and Isolation from Size and Natural Other Countries Landscape Climate Disasters Contact with only others like Frequency Different climates Small and develops a stoic in different areas nature in the mountainous people worldview Many separate islands - little Often had to start Climates suitable Mountains and sea over, rebuild for agriculture made travel difficult contact with others everything Didn't trade many Long coastlines -Made use of all goods, so ideas didn't get traded Encouraged beliefs only met others like resources - didn't in gods themselves need to trade a lot Provided lots of Non-navigable Unwilling to be Good soil for practice in adapting rivers - hard to influenced by farming, though to sudden change meet or trade with without changing limited amounts others the society