Reader's Notebook: The Other Side

Review the three sets of illustrations on pages 101 to 106 of Literacy in Action.

Answer these questions:

1. Which pair of images was the most interesting to you?

Answers will vary.

2. What do you think the illustrator was hoping to say with this collection of images?

Things seem very different from other perspectives.

3. Can you think of another pair of images that would reflect different perspectives in this fashion?

Describe a pair of illustrations that would do so.

Answers will vary. Descriptions should include very different perspectives.

Reader's Notebook: A Tangled Web

During Reading

Read through the script on pages 107 to 117 of Literacy in Action 6A, thinking about how Francine's feelings about her fun video change because of the perspectives of others.

Answer the question below.

1. Francine says she did not give her permission to post the video online. Do you think she gave permission and then changed her mind? What else might have happened to cause the email miscommunication? Why do her feelings change?

Did she give her email password to someone else? Did someone figure out her password because it was too easy? Did she not log out of a computer and someone pretended to be her? The reaction of others (laughing at her) made her feel badly about it. She wanted the embarrassment to stop.

2. Make a list of effective verbs you encounter during the reading.

Effective verbs may include imitates, fending off, glance, motions, mimes, inciting, mimicking, staring.

After Reading

Answer the last section of questions.

3. What could Jack and Zoey have done to ensure they were fair to Francine?

Answers may vary. Check with her before posting things about her online. Take care to protect someone else's online reputation.

4. Once something has been posted on the Internet, can the person who posted it control what happens? Why or why not?

No, you cannot control information once it is posted. Information may be available forever to people who would like to search for information about you. Your future employer could search your name to see your posts or locate information with your name attached. Protect your privacy and online reputation. Use good passwords. Avoid sharing passwords. Always log out of your computer.
